Afternoon Report From Carlyn to the Web

Please share some interesting stories about today...

We had chocolate-chip pancakes this morning for breakfast, they were so very tasty (Mary had never tried them before— her mother thought they were gross).

Also today we worked on maneuvers for the sail setting. We have mastered tacking and jiving. ☺

We viewed plankton under the microscope and got to see them clearer. They were cool. BURRITOS.

Any favorite wildlife sightings, quotes, games to share?

We saw deer which seemed pretty chill around us.

Seaducks! No, they're seagulls!!! SEADUCKS.

Melissa: Look a duck!

Everyone else: facepalm No Melissa, that's seaweed.

We played this obscure game where Stuart had a Frisbee and we had to get it over a certain line, and everyone had to touch it. You know; that game.

Describe the anchorage or moorage where Carlyn is right now:

We are anchored next to a dock on the more developed side of Blake Island.

Today's weather...

In the morning it was sprinkling.

Then it stopped raining but the clouds remained.

Describe highlights from today's science and sailing watches:

Today we worked on maneuvers for the sail setting. We have mastered tacking and jiving.

We viewed plankton under the microscope and got to see them clearer. They were cool.

Any questions, concerns, or expectations for tomorrow?

I think I speak for everyone in saying we will be excited to go home and take showers and sleep and also see family.
