

Expedition Log of the S/V Carlyn

Date: Oct. 24, 2011

Trip Day: Day 2

Location: Blake Island

Name(s): Craig Chapman

School/Grade: Lincoln High, 9th

Afternoon Report from Carlyn to the Web

Please share some interesting stories about today...

In the main sleeping quarters, somebody's phone went off at 3 a.m., to the annoyance of everybody in there. The propane tank wasn't working, so we had to dock at shil shoal bay in order to get good propane.

Any favorite wildlife sightings, quotes, games to share?

We constantly saw many assortments of fish and saw a couple of seals and sea lions.

Describe the anchorage or moorage where Carlyn is right now:

We are moored at Blake Island, where there are lots of Canadian Geese and Deer; and with them lots of droppings to avoid.

Today's weather...

Very strange. It was cold in the morning, and then we had a spat of rain till after lunch, when it cleared out and was sunny and warm for a long way out. As of this report, it's still sunny.

Describe highlights from today's science and sailing watches:

We put up and took down the sails in preparation to begin our voyage. A little while into our voyage, we spotted a large wave and buckled down. We rode it like pros and had fun doing it. During science, we used multiple techniques to find an explanation for our hypothesis.

Any questions, concerns, or expectations for tomorrow?

I think we can run the ship ourselves but we might have some trouble at first.